Teaching Experience: Adjunct Professor teaching "Legal Principles and Practices" and "Negotiation and Dispute Resolution" in New York University's Master's Program, Real Estate and Construction, 1991 to 2022; Adjunct Professor teaching "Construction Law" at Cardozo School of Law, 2018 to 2022. Training of Newly Appointed American Arbitration Association

Arbitrators, 2021-present; New York University Schack Institute of Real Estate/Construction Advisory Board Member, 2012-2017.

Experience as a Mediator: Member of the AAA Master Mediator Panel for Construction. Member of the AAA Master Mediator Panel for Construction. Member of the International Centre for Dispute Resolution's International Panel of Mediators. Mediated scores of cases involving, among other things, construction and design issues, commercial contracts, real estate, leases, condos, coops, high-end private residences, corporate and shareholder disputes and class action payment disputes. Served as the sole neutral selected by a hospital and a nursing home facility on Manhattan's Upper West Side and various community groups to work out a win-win protocol to resolve disputes involving the construction of two new hospital buildings and the effect it will have on those living in the adjacent residential neighborhoods. Served as one of two members of a Dispute Review Board selected by both the developer and builder of a new high-rise hotel in Manhattan. Currently serves as the Contract-appointed mediator in a multi-million environmental cleanup project. Pre-designated as mediator by the developer and construction manager in their general contract for the construction of a 63-story, 94-unit residential tower in midtown Manhattan. Recent successful mediations include (i) a payment/performance dispute between a City and its construction manager; (ii) a dispute between the developer of a commercial project and its general contractor over termination and performance issues; (iii) a dispute between the owner of a gut-renovated brownstone and its architect; (iv) a dispute between a condominium board and its architect; (v) a payment/scope of work dispute between the owner of a newly constructed, high-end residence and its general contractor; (vi) a prevailing wage dispute; (vii) a multi-million dollar extra work/delay damage dispute between a municipality and its prime contractor; (viii) a dispute between a commercial tenant and its general contractor over the sufficiency of the general contractor's work; (ix) a payment/extra work dispute among parties to a public works project; (x) a payment/performance dispute between the owner of a mixed-use building and its contractor involving remediation work to the building's façade; (xi) New York Labor Law and FLSA wage dispute claims between an employer and employee; (xii) various disputes between the developer of a 283-unit hotel project and its contractor; (xiii) disputes between a school district and its contractor involving the installation of windows at several school buildings; (xiv) contract balance, extra work, design and delay disputes between the owner of a high-end shopping center and its design team; (xv) a $24 million dispute between a European manufacturer and a United States-based company over the performance of supplied equipment and the sufficiency of the company's plant operations; (xvi) dispute between a commercial landlord and tenant over responsibility to pay for real estate taxes and mechanical improvement; (xvii) alleged errors and omissions in property surveys; (xviii) alleged accounting and legal malpractice; (xiv) design-build disputes between a contractor and its steel erector relating to various locations of a nationally-known chain of retail stores; (xvi) disputes between a general contractor and a non-profit over the construction of the latter's national headquarters; and (xvii) a multi-party dispute over the operation of a fire suppression system in a large industrial warehouse.

Representative Issues Handled as a Mediator: Construction disputes involving private and public owners, non-profit entities, contractors, subcontractors, suppliers, design professionals, sureties, colleges and universities. Disputed issues included: contract interpretation, allegedly defective work and alleged design errors, building envelope issues, submittal issues, alleged failure to pay and/or perform, change orders, retainage, substantial completion, alleged wrongful termination, the proper scope of work, responsibility for subsurface conditions, whether to enforce no damage for delay clauses, the scope and enforceability of written waivers/releases, scheduling, completion, consequential damages claims, liquidated damage claims, plus insurance coverage. Commercial and real estate disputes involving shopping centers, condos, coops, high-end residential construction, adjoining landowners, real estate taxes and partnership/shareholder issues.

Mediation Experience as an Advocate: Served as counsel for corporate clients in numerous mediations, including (i) construction defect cases involving spray-on fireproofing, masonry construction and water damage inside building envelopes and interior spaces, (ii) alleged design deficiencies, (iii) single-ply and built up roofing membrane performance and enforceability of roofing manufacturer warranties, (iv) elevator installations, (v) delay damages, (vi) change order disputes, (vii) contract termination disputes, (viii) commercial lease disputes, (ix) close-out agreements, (x) real estate tax disputes and (xi) insurance coverage disputes involving commercial general liability and errors and omissions policies.

Mediation Philosophy: To be effective, a mediator must facilitate a negotiation on the merits rather than encourage a contest of wills focused on what each side says it will and will not do. It is important to flush-out the interest of the parties and, whenever possible, to explore creative solutions, particularly because a failed mediation usually leads to a litigation or arbitration where a result will be imposed upon the parties. Preparations by both the parties and mediator is essential. I require the parties to submit pre-hearing submissions to enable me to learn as much as possible about the dispute prior to the formal mediation session. It is also critical that those attending the mediation are familiar with the issues and possess full settlement authority, including attendance by representatives of any insurance companies which may be involved. Although I have no objection to attorney participation in the form of an opening statement/evaluation during a joint session at the commencement of the mediation, thereafter I encourage the parties themselves to take an active role. Unless the circumstances dictate that the best result is for both parties to walk away from the mediation without an agreement, an experienced mediator does whatever he or she can to keep the parties moving closer together. Sometimes this requires the mediator to act more as a facilitator and keep the parties negotiating; other times it requires the mediator to be more pro-active by offering opinions on the strengths and weaknesses of the positions and by furnishing a cost-benefit and/or risk-reward analysis with respect to reaching a voluntary settlement as opposed to proceeding to litigation or arbitration. The best mediators understand the importance of not giving up-even when one or both of the parties appear resigned to a failed mediation.

Selected Accolades: Past President and current Executive Board Member of the College of Commercial Arbitrators; Named by Super Lawyers to its list of the “100 Top Lawyers” for the New York Metropolitan Area in 2016, 2017, 2018, 2021-2023; Super Lawyer for more than 15 consecutive years; Best Lawyers “Lawyer of the Year” in New York City for Litigation-Construction Law in 2017; Super Lawyer in ADR, 2020-23; Best Lawyer in Construction Litigation for New York City for more than 10 consecutive years. Best Lawyer in Construction Law, Arbitration and Mediation, 2021-23; Chambers USA Band 1 Construction Mediator, 2021-23; Fellow, Chartered Institute of Arbitrators; Member, National Academy of Distinguished Neutrals; AV Preeminent, Martindale Hubbell; Award for Outstanding Service,” New York University School of Professional Studies, 2015; "One of the World's Leading Practitioners" in Construction, Who's Who Legal; Recipient in 2021 of the Albert Nelson Marquis Who's Who Lifetime Achievement Award; and Member, AAA Arbitrator National Advisory Committee, 2015-2016.
